

Hope House

Hope House is a sober living home for adult women that offers an opportunity for residents to invest in a strong foundation for their recovery from alcohol or others drugs. Hope House was developed to assist Langlade County residents with their recovery in a safe, supportive environment while gaining strength and confidence from their peers and house mates.

Hope House Residents are Required to:

- Be in active substance use treatment or therapy
- Attend community recovery activities such as those from AA or NA
- Have a sponsor or recovery coach
- Maintain lifestyle requirements such as sobriety, curfews, house cleaning, maintenance and cooking
- Spend forty hours per week participating in higher education, volunteering or work activities

Upon acceptance into Hope House, residents have thirty days to establish these supports and meet requirements for living in the home.

Building Strong Foundations for Recovery in Our Community

Continuing Recovery at Hope House

Based on the Apricity Model of recovery, Hope House is operated by NCHC staff and a live-in mentor in recovery. This Model promotes building community in a long-term supportive environment with others in similar circumstances.

Hope House is open for referrals from our community including healthcare, social services, law enforcement and justice partners, employers, treatment centers and from North Central Health Care Behavioral Health and Crisis programs. Individuals may also self-refer. You do not need a physician referral to become a Hope House resident.

To start the process, an application form must be completed which includes information about the applicant, previous treatment, sober living experiences and personal references.

Why Sober Living?

Sober living offers individuals post-treatment an opportunity to invest time building a stronger foundation for their recovery and stop the revolving door of sobriety followed by relapse.

Often a person leaves treatment without the safety and security of housing that honors his or her new recovery lifestyle. Sober living homes provide a nurturing atmosphere where individuals are empowered to continue their recovery in a long-term, supportive environment. Residents will share their experience with others who are in similar circumstances.

This environment also prevents potential isolation. Solitude and lack of support, whether personal or environmental, are two of the most common reasons for relapse. Spending time in a Sober Living house helps individuals in recovery gain strength and confidence from their house mates and peers.

Whether you're committed to strengthening your recovery or you desire safe, sober housing as an investment in your or a loved one's recovery, Hope House is here to help.

Studies indicate that the likelihood of maintaining long-term sobriety doubles when residing in a sober living house.
